RFM ANALYSIS DESCRIPTION AND MARKETING ACTIONS

RFM analysis segments customers based on three key metrics: Recency, Frequency, and Monetary Value. These metrics help businesses understand customer behavior and tailor marketing efforts effectively.

1. Recency (R)

- What it measures: How recently a customer made a purchase or interacted with the business.
- Why it's important: Recent customers are more likely to respond to promotions or offers.

2. Frequency (F)

- What it measures: How often a customer makes a purchase or interacts with the business.
- Why it's important: Frequent customers are more loyal and ideal for upselling or retention campaigns.

3. Monetary Value (M)

- What it measures: How much money a customer spends within a given period.
- Why it's important: Higher spenders are more profitable and should be targeted with personalized offers.

Segment	Description	Marketing Action
Lost customers
Cannot Lose Them	High-value customers with recent inactivity or signs of disengagement.	Provide VIP treatment, personalized outreach, or exclusive offers to rekindle their loyalty.
At Risk	Customers with reduced frequency of purchase or engagement, indicating potential churn.	Offer incentives such as loyalty rewards or exclusive promotions to encourage retention.
Need Attention	Customers with decent engagement but show early signs of decreasing interest or activity.	Monitor closely, offer encouragement to stay engaged with personalized recommendations.
Hibernating customers
About To Sleep	Customers who have purchased before but have shown declining engagement or inactivity.	Send personalized re-engagement campaigns, offer discounts or reminders about their previous purchases.
New Customers	First-time buyers who recently started engaging with your brand.	Onboard with welcome emails, educational content, or incentives for repeat purchases.
Promising	New or occasional customers with good potential based on recent behavior.	Encourage further engagement with special offers, tailored content, or invitations to loyalty programs.
Potential Loyalist	Customers with growing interest and engagement, indicating a potential to become loyal.	Nurture with personalized offers, recognition, and incentives to solidify their loyalty.
Loyal	Regular customers who consistently engage with and purchase from your brand.	Maintain engagement through personalized communication, loyalty programs, and occasional rewards.
Champions	Most loyal and valuable customers who frequently purchase and engage with your brand.	Reward with loyalty programs, exclusive previews, or priority access to new products/services.
